English Version

The Complutense University of Madrid (UCM) is the largest university in Spain and one of the oldest and most prestigious. Its origin dates back to the late 13th Century.

UCM is strategically located in Madrid and easy to reach from anywhere.

We have two Campuses: “Ciudad Universitaria” Campus, in the downtown and “Somosaguas” Campus, 8 km from Madrid. There are also some other locations in the centre of Madrid.

There are easy connections to UCM from Madrid Barajas Airport and you will find that Madrid's extensive public transport system is convenient and easy to use.

In 1927, the Ciudad Universitaria was conceived as an integrated campus where education, science and culture would merge harmoniously with each other. The Campus of Moncloa project endeavours to take the lead in responding to the challenges of the 21st century, namely knowledge and sustainable development.

The Campus includes the following Faculties:

The Campus includes the following faculties:

In December 2009, Spain's Ministry of Education recognized the Complutense University of Madrid (UCM) and the Technical University of Madrid (UPM) as partners in an International Campus of Excellence, Moncloa Campus.

The Moncloa Campus Project identifies six thematic clusters: Global change and new energies; Materials for the future; AgriFood and health; Innovation in health; Heritage and Sustainable Mobility.

The Complutense University of Madrid traces its origins to the Estudio de Escuelas Generales de Alcalá, founded by King Sancho IV of Castille in 1293.

1499: Cardinal Cisneros founds the “El Colegio Mayor San Ildefonso”, the predecessor of today’s university, in the town of Alcalá de Henares.

1509: The University has five faculties.

1836: Under the reign of Isabel II, the university is moved to Madrid where it took the name Universidad Central.

1927: Construction begins on the Moncloa campus on land granted by King Alfonso XIII.

1970: The Central University is renamed the Complutense and the Somosaguas Campus is created.

2018: The Complutense University is now the largest university in Madrid and one of the most important universities in Spain and in Europe.
