The Master's course is filling the gap existing at present in the area of European degrees related to the diffusion of the various schools and theories related to economic and business thought, as well as understanding the bases for the controversies occurring between them. The recent best-seller of Lawrence Wright's The clash of economic ideas, published by Antoni Bosch shows how much interest exists in ascertaining the reasons for the most significant disputes among economists. In fact, you will journey among the ideas that have marked economic thought up to its present-day form: How to fight poverty, inequality, unemployment, Do we have to have austerity, public spending, regulation, privatization. What type of labour market reform has to be made?
